Daniel is a litigation attorney who represents clients in fiduciary litigation, guardianship, conservatorship, and related Orphans' Court matters. His work includes proceedings involving the appointment and oversight of guardians and conservators for minors and incapacitated adults.

Before joining McNees, Daniel defended general liability, personal injury, and medical malpractice matters. He drafted motions, took and defended depositions, and worked with counsel and clients to resolve disputes through negotiation.

Daniel also gained experience in estate planning and small business matters, including wills, powers of attorney, and real estate transactions. He previously served as a law clerk with the Delaware Department of Justice, Office of the Attorney General, where he worked on criminal matters and complex regulatory research.
